

Workers' compensation claims made easy

Work-related injuries and the aftermath from an incident on a jobsite is stressful for employees and employers. While employees have to deal with recovering physically from such an event, employers are left with piles of paperwork and claims forms to fill out, along with the possibility of lawsuits looming over them.

To help alleviate some of these stressors, eBacon offers a comprehensive claims management system that allows employers to document and report work-related injuries quickly and accurately.

No need to enter demographic information

Since the eBacon platform already has all demographics entered into the system for each employee when they are onboarded, there is no need to manually enter information again when you need to create a workers' compensation claim. While this helps save time for your company, it also ensures that information is accurate.

Track everything for each claim

From the time you submit a claim to the completion and closure of it, you can keep track of the status and all details throughout the entire process.

OSHA forms automatically generated

For many employers, OSHA requires employers to have a 301 form on file for at least five years. With eBacon's claims management system, the OSHA 301 form automatically populates all the required information — another time-saving component of the platform that can help minimize the need for manual entry.
